

The making of post-war Manchester 1945-74 : Plans and projects

Wednesday 8th May 2013 0900-1700

Cordingley Lecture Theatre . Kantorowich Building

Humanities Bridgeford Street . University of Manchester

Convened by Richard Brook and Martin Dodge

A one-day symposium of talks on post-war urban transformations in Manchester. The aim is to narrate the changing social and physical development of the city during three crucial decades from 1945. The presentations will consider events, such as 'smokeless zones', the building of the first computer, and large scale built projects of the era, including Mancunian Way and the University expansion, in relation to civic plans, infrastructural initiatives, local and national government policies, technological innovation and the wider fiscal climate.

Cities@Manchester . Manchester School of Architecture . MMU . The University of Manchester . Manchester Statistical Society

This event is free. In order to attend please register before May 1st at: postwarmcr.eventbrite.co.uk

For further details please visit: postwarmcr.wordpress.com